Range Line 'Road Diet' coming to Carmel

City plans to reduce lanes, widen bike and pedestrian paths, enhance crosswalks and add roundabouts to Range Line Road

What: Media conference to announce major changes coming to Range Line Road in Carmel from 116th Street to the Arts & Design District.

When: Monday, April 17
10 a.m.

Where: Carmel City Council Chambers, One Civic Square

Who: Mayor Jim Brainard; City Engineer Jeremy Kashman

Background:

Range Line Road is a major north-south thoroughfare that runs through the heart of Carmel and the City's redevelopment areas, such as Midtown, City Center and the future Proscenium project. The road is two-lanes wide in the Arts & Design District, expands to four lanes and a middle turn lane from 4th Street to 116th Street. The City has budgeted an estimated $13.5 million in funds from its most recent construction bond issue to pay for a project that will make the street less congested and more safe for both motorists and pedestrians.

NOTE: A digitally enhanced video clip will be shown and made available to the media at the press conference.
